Beyond Ken Friedman's Twelve Fluxus Ideas - 25 more ideas proposed by Fluxus Laboratories.

Greetings all,

In development but please check out

<http://fluxuslaboratories.org/index.html> and <http://fluxshop.net/>

I am upgrading fluxshop so that it has a shopping card system. I am gradually transferring products from fluxshop.com to fluxshop.net and add the other fluxproducts that people have sent me. I hope to have several hundred products available eventually.

Send stuff to sell!

Meanwhile, we have examined and tested various fluxproducts and have added the following new Ideas for identifying genuine fluxus works. Let me know what you think.

Beyond Ken Friedman's Twelve Fluxus Ideas - 25 more ideas proposed by Fluxus Laboratories.

Contemporaneousness - many works are intended to be present in the present rather than left for history or for the future.

interactivity - many fluxus works intend to be directly interactive rather than views from a distance minimalness - many works are intentionally reduced to minimal design containing no extraneous elements equivocalness - many fluxus works are designed to be ambiguous and open to multiple interpretations

Inclusive - a fluxus idea is to include rather than exclude whether it be other members/non-members of the group or spectators/audience poetic - many works have a poetic quality to them portability - many fluxus works are designed to be easily stored and moved about through shipping or mail services, often reduced to scores to be realized on location rather than created in a studio and then moved about at great expense.

productionalism - many fluxus works are intended to become manufactured multiple products rather than unique works of art.

programatic - many fluxus projects happen according to a plan or program, many works are serial in nature and are developed along a certain plan or according to certain rules.

communal - many fluxus works are held in common among a group of artists for general use by all of them.

didactic - many fluxus works are intentionally instructional progressive - works that take previous ideas in a new direction

self empowered - many fluxus works exhibit an indifference to accepted norms

Mimetic - many fluxus works mimic common products and designs, scientific procedures, government activities, etc.

Nostalgic - From the beginning many fluxus artists often refer to past works in current works.

Tentativeness - fluxus works are often the product of uncertainty - works are often created without a certain intention in mind allowing the artist to explore alternate possibilities as he goes along

Quirkiness - works often exhibit a certain strangeness or unusualness about the thought processes used in their creation

Obsessiveness - many works imply an obsessive nature in their creators

Uselessness - works often, as part of their quality, render useful objects or performance materials useless or apparently useful activities are accomplished to achieve uselessness.

Materialistic - many fluxus works exhibit a love of the materials that they are made from and exhibit attention to those materials. Many fluxus works do not suggest a dialog beyond their own scope. multidimensional - many works can exist in a variety of forms or are designed to have a multitude of possible meanings or permutations or media

Adaptive - many fluxus works are intended to adapt to new situations and are not locked into a specific place, time or style.

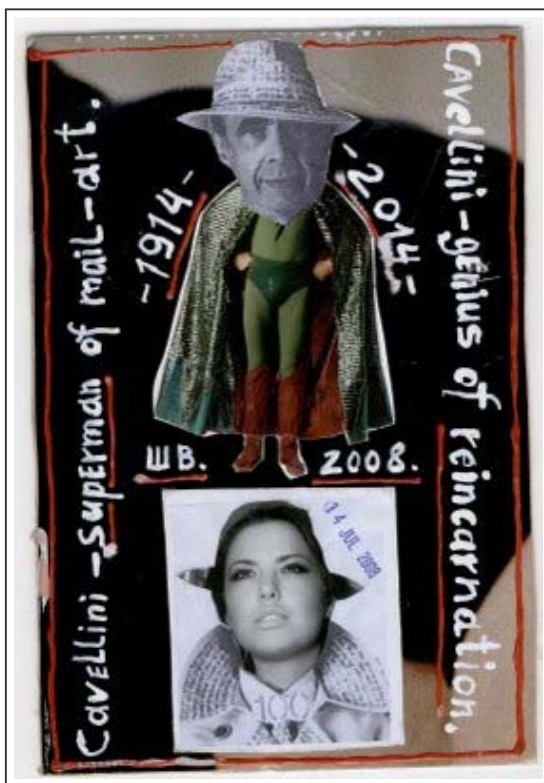

porousness - Fluxus has no rigid boundaries and allows anyone to take up fluxus activity. Anyone can join in with other fluxus artists and be accepted as a part of the group.

revolutionary - many fluxus works suggest a program of revolution against one thing or another and especially against the 'establishment' or status quo.
